Tourism e-services and Jewish Prague: eliciting users' preferences

Dr. Wadim Strielkowski
Charles University in Prague
Dr. Nicole Mitsche
University of Sunderland

July 2015

Outline

- Eliciting users' preferences and willingness to pay for novel packages of e-services used in commercial tourism and for promoting the intangible cultural heritage in European destinations.
- Case study of Prague's Jewish heritage - empirical results of 3 stages of surveys (240 questionnaires) conducted in May-August 2013.
- Potential app should feature a narrative, a possibility to upload additional information, as well as interactive online maps.
- The app should be offered free of charge with embedded in-app purchases that might reach up to 3 EUR in additional payments.

Changes to tourism industry

- Major changes in the tourism industry impact the way cultural tourism will develop in the forthcoming decades (see Beeton, 2004; Carl et al., 2007, or Strielkowski, 2012).
- Shift from the traditional to the novel way of experiencing cultural resources based on employing a major fusion of information and communication technologies (ICT), as well as the new services (e-services)
- Preferences of potential tourists for innovative and novel e-services that might enhance their experience before, during, and after a visit to the cultural destination of their choice.

In Jewish mythology Golem resembles an animated anthropomorphic entity created entirely from inanimate matter

There are several legends featuring Golem that took place in various parts of Europe, perhaps the most famous legend involves Judah Loew ben Bezalel, the 16th century Chief Rabbi of Prague and the famous Cabbalist of his day who allegedly created the Golem to defend the Prague ghetto and the local Jewish community (Sherwin, 1985).

Survey methodology

- Questionnaire was developed based on the results of the in-depth interviews and small focus groups held in Prague in spring 2014.
- The questionnaire was designed to be completed during a maximum time of 5 minutes.
- The sample size of respondents was set at 240. The response rate was 72.50%. Respondents were selected from all age groups, and different nationalities.
- Random sampling - interviewers randomly targeted locations around Prague's Old Town and approached every 3rd visitor leaving the tourist site (a museum, or a synagogue, etc.).

Our respondents by country

France	25
USA	17
UK	14
Germany	12
Poland	10
Israel	6
Netherlands	5
Italy	4
Russia	4
Korea	3

Conjoint analysis

- The objective is to estimate the economic value that individuals place on some proposed sets of e-services.
- We estimate the marginal WTP for each of the offered e-services included with a different combination of proposed e-packages
- Respondents were asked to choose between packages A, B or to reject both. In order to familiarize the respondents with the packages, the choices were preceded by screens explaining the scenarios in detail.
- Pairs of e-services included in each scenario were selected out of all possible combinations of the attribute levels, by removing pairs containing dominating or identical alternatives.

Operation Anthropoid – Prague's new tourism magnet?

8/15/15 - I was very moved by the film. It was a thoroughly moving experience and a beautiful tribute to real heroes.
Thank you

Conclusions & discussions

- A potential app should contain user-friendly features which are to be found on the tourism-related websites. Users demand high-quality online maps indicating the availability of businesses and services around Prague's Jewish Heritage as well as the users' reviews.
- User prefer free apps, but the majority of respondents are willing to pay for the application. It is possible to offer a light version with upgrade.
- The most preferred locations are the Jewish cemetery and synagogues located in Prague's Jewish Quarter. It would be useful if a mobile app includes the sights and sounds from other areas of Prague's Jewish Quarter for expanding the demand for other Jewish heritage-related locations.
